

JARRETT BAY 34

“Jarrett Bay’s definition of a fish-around is a unique crossbreed of a performance-based, traditional offshore center-console and a more traditional offshore walkaround,” says Zach Boslau, new-construction foreman. “There’s a fairly harsh gap between the two styles, with not many options in the market for anything in between.”

The builder does introduce a slight step up to the bridge deck and foredeck

Though the Jarrett Bay 34 does come with a step up to the bridge and foredeck, its bow area is roomy and completely fishable. The aft edge of the step also features safe storage for two gaffs.

on the 34 — which Jarrett Bay actually labels a semiproduction Walk-Around Express, rather than a fish-around — but the bow area offers deep freeboard, which permits easy and safe fishing access. To appeal to anglers, Jarrett Bay even hid gaff storage on the aft edge of this small step-up.

The 34 also brings multiple livewells (50-gallon well in the transom) and fish boxes to the party, plus plenty of rod storage. “It merges design features from small and large offshore boats — it’s incredibly quick and maneuverable but performs like a big boat in challenging seas,” says Boslau.

On the bridge and in the cockpit, it offers comfortable seating, and also provides V-bunks and a head belowdecks.

“The Jarrett Bay 34 would be ideal for any hard-core weekend warriors who want to chase billfish but might not want the full-time responsibility and upkeep of a larger boat,” Boslau advises, “or the full-time South Florida guide who spends most of his or her time in skinny water, running to multiple spots throughout the day.”
